“Dislike to Endurance to Even Better” Rev. Christine Emmerling D.D.

I am so grateful to live so close to the ocean – just 45 minutes away to either Santa Cruz or Monterey. How blessed we are. We do our best to go once a month to visit my sister in Aptos to have a visit and lunch at the Santa Cruz yacht harbor. Now Aptos gets much more fog than Santa Cruz. My sister dislikes fog, and yet that is what she gets on most days throughout the summer. The hotter it is inland the denser the fog gets on the coast. Instead of complaining and being miserable she is grateful for the home she has – fog in all, and gets to the sun whenever she can.

We all at times get things that we dislike and have to endure. I dislike, even impatient with a slow computer response time. That can be while on the web searching, waiting for a page to pull up or opening an email. It doesn't matter the cause or what I think the cause of my impatience. All that really doesn't matter because it's already in me just waiting to come out. It could just as well be a long stop light, or a pedestrian crossing the street, or waiting in line at the store, or all those commercials on TV.

Why do we stress out over the small stuff? Some people can rant throwing their negative energy around, and think that is just normal behavior. Well, their blood pressure might say otherwise, and their friends and partners too. How can we begin to tone down our impatience? I remember being very frustrated while commuting to work, and have people throw their finger with choice words at me. Now commuting wasn't going to go away anytime soon so I looked at what I could do to make it a better experience.

First, I learned to have compassion for the drivers. I had a scenario that they must have been running late to work, and afraid of being fired. Also, knowing that I'm not a perfect driver. Second, then I learned to think good thoughts, affirming thoughts while driving. Third, I learned to actually bless them with a “God bless you.” Even with those waving their fingers I blessed. My drive got so much better, and I arrived to work peacefully – not all strung out. We are learning to shine our light, like a lighthouse, regardless of the conditions at hand.

“The Divine Creative Flow” by Rev. Mark Stuefloten

The Divine creative flow carries creative ideas that are for us to use, ideas for scientists, artists, sales people, and people from all walks of life. Creative ideas are available to those who are in tune to them. I'll give you an example: When I was a freelance cartoonist, I was in tune to humorous ideas. I carried a pen and paper with me, ready to write down the humorous ideas when they popped into my mind, and they did in abundance. At the same time, other cartoonists got the same ideas. Sometimes I would see cartoons already published with the same humorous idea.

A scientist may get a humorous idea and a cartoonist may get a scientific idea, but the majority of times you get the ideas that come from what you are working on.

If you are short on creative ideas, the best way I discovered to get into the divine creative flow is to relax. Write down the ideas you have. That will get your divine creative flow going within you and then the universal Divine creative flow will begin to match you, delivering more creative ideas to you, and working together with you to improve your creative skills. Your mind will be like a net cast out into the cosmic ocean, catching an abundance of creative ideas to work from.
